

HAVERFORD TO STAND FIRM IN MOVEMENT FOR CLEAN ATHLETICS

Pres. Comfort, Dr. Babbitt and Coach Harman Praise Athletic Policy

TEAM CAPTAINS SPEAK

"Haverford is in a position to lead in a movement developing among Pennsylvania colleges to clean up intercollegiate athletics," said Dr. Comfort, President of Haverford, in one of the main speeches of an athletic round table held at the Merion Golf Club under the auspices of Beta Rho Sigma last Monday evening, October 26. Coach Harman in following Dr. Comfort expressed himself as in full accord with Haverford's athletic policy which he desired to see Alumni, Faculty and Student Body aim to put good athletic teams on the field with this Haverford method. Harman especially wishes clean athletics and winning teams to be maintained.

President Comfort in starting his address began by reading verbatim the Faculty resolution defining Haverford's stand on Freshman entrance. He stated the clean-up movement was being set on air in Pennsylvania to better the status of athletics but that many of the college presidents did not have the courage to be the first in the reform. "They believe themselves to be bound by local Alumni groups, fraternities and varsity clubs," said Dr. Comfort. "They do not wish to be the first to drive into a cleaning house process but they will be only too willing to follow once it is started."

Scientific Society Hopes to Get William Beebe to Speak Later

"Aerial Mapping" will be the subject of the next meeting of the Scientific Society which will hold on Tuesday evening November 10. The Fairchild Camera Company has developed a great deal of apparatus for making maps by photographs taken from aeroplanes. If Beebe is in the country, the Consulting Engineer of the Company, the single purpose of this week, he will discuss these developments himself, otherwise it is expected that another representative of the Company will speak.

Regurgitations

The general opinion among college students at present is that the United States should enter the World Court. Time and again references are made by institutions that undergraduate bodies favor our entrance. Only last week at Haverford at the "X" Forum the general consensus of opinion was that such a move would be advisable.

Our entrance into the Court would be a first official move to break the policy of isolation that we have pursued since the war. Intelligent people almost unanimously agree that such a policy is foolish. Economists agree that it is almost impossible to maintain. Then how can college men make their opinions felt?

The News is planning to take a vote in Haverford, and perhaps among all the colleges of this section on the question of entering the Court. This vote will receive rather wide publicity, and will have some influence on public opinion. And it will only have some force if it is felt that the matter has been carefully thought out by the students and is not the result of a capricious whim.

A Commendable Situation

The passage by the Student's Association of an amendment to the constitution allowing entrance on the starting point marks the third time in a year that the college has asked and received of the faculty permission to modify some of the more stringent of the college customs. First, a raising of the smoking on the Gym terrace during dances; then Sunday tennis and golf were granted; and now smoking on the starting point seems assured of approval. This marks a new departure in the policy of the faculty. The time is not yet out of mind when such things were frowned upon at Haverford. Even when the faculty now shows an inclination to make less severe the somewhat Puritan regulations which have been in effect on the college. They have made an effort to meet the students half way, and the students have aided materially by co-operation. It is not easy for the older men on the faculty to understand the wishes and desires of the undergraduates. Quite naturally they look askance at such of the regulations that have been in effect. Yet they have shown a determination to realize their policy. The students, on the other hand, have shown an equal determination to be as tolerant as the faculty has been liberal. They have asked for no more than they consider fair, and have kept well within the regulations in force. Even when their requests have been refused, they have taken the refusals with reasonably good grace. This situation is quite commendable. While the moral of this college is that the faculty can command such co-operation as this from the students in matters on which they disagree, there need be no fear of any such quarrels between faculty and students as are all too common in American colleges. As long as this morale is maintained, Haverford may consider itself fortunate.

Physical Vigor

Haverford presents a united front in its refusal to give weight to athletic ability as a qualification for Freshman entrance. Faculty and Students are unanimously agreed in proclaiming to the intercollegiate world that athletics at Haverford are run and shall be run on a strictly clean, non-subsidized basis. This is a courageous stand to take. The News has often spoken against what it conceives to be a state of stagnation along several Haverford policies and it now desires to be equally lavish in its praise of this progressive athletic programme that may bring great changes in the status of intercollegiate sport. Amid the wholesale purchase of athletes to build commercial gridiron machines, Haverford stands to stand as it has stood, for sport for the sake of the game.

It is particularly significant to note in the recent release of Haverford policy the following statements: "There are some very subtle dangers in American collegiate athletics. The inclusion of 'physical vigor' among entrance requirements or in the qualifications for a scholarship is open to the door to all the evils of subsidized athletics. Such a qualification for a Rhodes scholarship may be entirely wholesome because of the status of collegiate athletics in England. In America the inclusion of 'physical vigor' may readily connote special ability as an athlete."

It is not that physical vigor is undesirable or that athletic prowess is to be scoffed at. It is the status of American intercollegiate athletics it is almost impossible to give special encouragement to those features without lowering academic standards and approaching the plane of subsidized athletics. Such an interpretation of athletic policy shows a keen insight of the misuse of the term "physical vigor" as applied in so many colleges today. It also shows a sound contempt for the professional athlete who is paid to attend an institution of higher learning not for learning but merely to advertise that institution in intercollegiate competition.

Haverford stands in the lead with a clean athletic policy among Pennsylvania Colleges. The administration does not buy athletes under the guise of "physical vigor" scholarships. Alumni agencies or individuals do not purchase them in an indirect manner, nor do student fraternities with inflated pocketbooks make it their business to seek for men whose main qualification is beef and brawn.

Following this stand, friends of Haverford should do all within their power to let it be generally known that their college is exercising what influence it possesses for a sane athletic outlook. All possible effort should be made to turn out good teams in a normal way so that Haverford may demonstrate that good teams and clean athletics are not necessarily in opposition.

This entire movement toward clean athletics is bound to be a long and arduous one. It is a reform that is destined to come if colleges in general are to amount to something more than the mere cards in order to facilitate the all the support and leadership that Haverford can give it.

CHARITY CHEST DRIVE SET FOR NOV. 9-14

Goal of Annual Canvass of Student Body by Y. M. C. A. Placed at $3000

November 9-14 is the week set aside by the Charity Chest Committee of the Y. M. C. A. for the annual Charity Chest Drive. The goal of the drive will be $3000, a higher mark per student than in any drive heretofore. The object of the campaign will be the same as it was last year, "A Month's Allowance." The drive will be conducted similarly to that of 1924, according to Wood, '26, chairman of the committee. One member of each class will be put in charge of soliciting the contributions in that class. He will collect other men to assist him. They will have contribution cards divided into two parts, one to be given by the solicitor as a receipt and the other kept by the donor as a receipt and a reminder of the next payment. The chairman of the committee requests that the donors preserve the receipt cards in order to facilitate the collection and tabulation of the funds.

Dates for Payment. Three payments, December 1, January 1 and March 2, have been suggested for the payments. Any one who finds it more convenient to pay immediately on different dates than those suggested may do so. May 1 has been set by the committee as the latest date for the payments to be made. The money will be divided by the Y. M. C. A. cabinet as they see fit. Any student wishing all or part of his contribution as so to no particular organization may specify his preference on his card, and the donation will be distributed accordingly. These specified contributions will be made before the apportionment is decided upon by the cabinet so that they will be in addition to, not part of, the regular share of the fund. Owing to the great difference in numbers among the classes, the competition between the classes will be fiercest between the odd and even classes rather than among the individual classes. The seniors and sophomores will compete against the juniors and freshmen to see which class first subscribe its quota of $1500.

WORLD COURT SUBJECT DISCUSSED BY M.C.A. OPEN FORM MEETING

Sargent Explains Origin and History of Organization; Open Discussion Follows

STAND OF U. S. ON COURT

A new experiment was given a trial by the Y. M. C. A. last Wednesday when the weekly meeting took the form of an open forum discussion on the World Court. Although hampered by an unusually small attendance, the meeting proved both interesting and enlightening. Sargent, '27, opened the meeting with a brief history and explanation of the World Court and its purpose. He stated that the World Court had its foundations in the two Hague Conferences of 1899 and 1907. These were called for the purpose of establishing a permanent court of international justice, but they failed in their efforts because of the lack of conferring powers to agree on the method for selecting the judges.

Acceptable Plan Drawn Up. In 1920 a conference of representatives of eleven Powers met to establish a court under the provisions of Article XIX of the Covenant of the League of Nations. After much deliberation this conference finally drew up a plan which proved acceptable to the Powers involved. Under this plan there was established a World Court of eleven judges and four deputy justices, elected by the League of Nations, but independent of the League after their election. These men, one from each of the eleven Powers, in order to qualify for election to the World Court, must be jurists of proven ability and eligible for the highest judicial position in their respective countries. This plan was approved by all of the great Powers of the world, with the single exception of the United States.

U. S. Entrance Discussed. The first question raised in the discussion was the question of our proposed ratification to the United States. It was explained that American entrance into the court was held up by the opposition of the late Senator Lodge, chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee. Senator Lodge's objections were that the Senate would be willing to approve the necessary treaties if the court were to be organized by the Foreign Relations Committee. At present it is the opposition of Senator Borah to the so-called Harding-Hughes plan that is blocking action on American ratification of the court.

Relation of Court and League. The principle objection offered to the entrance of the United States is that our country, not having membership in the League of Nations, would have no part in the election of the justices. The Harding-Hughes plan would provide a method whereby the United States could participate in the elections. The question was also raised as to whether this country could enter the World Court and still be outside the League of Nations, and whether it would want to if it could. It was generally agreed that the entrance of the United States into the court would be a decided step toward entrance into the League of Nations.
