Course Description

The concept of “globalization” burst on the scene in the 1990s and has continued to define many academic, policy, and social debates. In this course we will examine the politics of globalization. What does globalization mean? What are its economic, cultural, environmental, and social justice dimensions? How are the dynamics of globalization transforming economies and eliciting political backlash? How do political institutions govern global flows of money, goods, people, and waste? What happens to state sovereignty in a globalizing world? Can we distinguish “global government” from “global governance,” and if so, when? Is globalization “good” for democracy? Does global economic interdependence generate unique social justice obligations? Do our consumption practices make us complicit in the sweatshop conditions and environmental injustices perpetrated by some multinational corporations? What are we to make of the recent upsurge of anti-globalization sentiment in many countries, including the US? This course will critically examine these and other questions while also introducing students to the political science discipline.

Course Aims

• Introduce students to the political science discipline and to subfields of political economy and global governance
• Introduce students to transnational modes of production, trade and finance
• Teach students about the differences between key international organizations such as the IMF, the World Bank, and the World Trade Organization
• Introduce students to how economic globalization has affected race, class and gender relations
• Encourage students to think about the nature of justice and social and political responsibility in light of global interdependence.
• Guide students in conducting original independent and collaborative social science research that makes use of library resources
• Some key concepts:
  o Global Governance, Global Justice, Sovereignty, Global Governance, Neoliberalism, Capitalism, Sweatshops, Commodity Chains, Trade Regimes, Global Finance, Bretton Woods, Neoliberalism, Deterritorialization, Transnational Civil Society, Cosmopolitanism, Time-Space Compression, Climate Justice
Course Dynamics

Readings
The type and length of readings for this course will vary considerably from class to class. Some readings will be very detailed and factual. Others will be more conceptual. Some will be academic. Others will be journalistic. In all cases, you are expected to come to class having read the readings and prepared to discuss them, even if we end up not having time to discuss all of them in full. While the details of any given reading assignment are important, you are especially encouraged to be attentive to and critical of the general themes and ideas that frame the arguments made in the texts. In simpler terms: pay attention to details but don’t get lost in them.

Class Environment
I aim to create a collegial yet rigorous environment that examines course material through a mix of lecture, all-class and small-group conversation, and student-led discussion. To help achieve these goals, please refrain from the following: side talking during lecture or discussion, texting during class, disrupting class if arriving late or leaving early, recording the proceedings of the course without express consent of the instructor, or turning in unstapled work. If something is urgent, quietly step outside of class to take care of your business.

Access and Disability Accommodations
Haverford College is committed to supporting the learning process for all students. Please contact me as soon as possible if you are having difficulties in the course. There are also many resources on campus available to you as a student, including the Office of Academic Resources (https://www.haverford.edu/oar/) and the Office of Access and Disability Services (https://www.haverford.edu/access-and-disability-services/). If you think you may need accommodations because of a disability, you should contact Access and Disability Services at hc-ads@haverford.edu. If you have already been approved to receive academic accommodations and would like to request accommodations in this course because of a disability, please meet with me privately at the beginning of the semester (ideally within the first two weeks) with your verification letter.

Grade Appeals
Faculty sometimes make mistakes. If you feel that the grade you received on a particular assignment is not warranted due to an error in grading, please feel free to discuss this situation with me. Please know, however, that I retain the discretion to determine the worthiness of the appeal. Additionally, you must adhere to the following grade dispute policy:
- Contact me after 24 hours but within 7 days of receiving your grade
- Write out the substance of your disagreement
- Arrange a face-to-face meeting

Plagiarism
Cheating and plagiarism are offenses against academic integrity. Plagiarism is copying someone else’s work and presenting it as your own without attributing it to its real source. There will be no exceptions for cases of cheating or plagiarism, and disciplinary action will be taken. If you have any questions about what constitutes plagiarism, please speak with me. It is assumed that you are familiar with Haverford’s policies regarding plagiarism.

E-mail policy
I will respond to all e-mail, but expect that it may sometimes take between 24-48 hours.
Assignments

1. Participation
The participation aspect of your grade will reflect the quality of your contribution to in-class discussion. This includes both vocal participation and your assistance in creating an atmosphere that encourages all voices to be heard. The class is large, which will constrain discussion in some ways, but know that participation is vital to the experience of this course. For some of you, this will mean speaking up more than you otherwise would. For others of you, it will mean holding back more than you otherwise would. Participation can take multiple forms—it can involve careful listening and thoughtful reflection as well as careful speaking and attentive interaction with other students. But bear in mind that it isn’t participation if you are keeping your thoughts entirely to yourself and merely soaking in what others have to say.

2. World News
At the beginning of the semester you will be asked to pick a country whose news you will follow over the course of the semester. Three times during the semester you will turn in a 2-page summary of the news headlines (related to globalization broadly construed) as represented in the country’s own news sources. I will periodically take time in class to allow you to share what is going on in your country. These will factor into your participation grade. There are numerous portals with links to foreign news websites. Here are a few: http://www.ipl.org/div/news/ http://www.worldpress.org/gateway.htm http://www.abyznewslinks.com/allco.htm

3. Take-Home Midterm Exam
You will be given a take-home, closed-book, anonymous, open-notes, 24-hour midterm exam before fall break. This will be comprised of a short-answer section and two longer interpretive essay sections.

4. Mapping Global Production and Global Waste
Beginning before fall break and ending near the conclusion of the semester, you will work in teams to study, map, and publicly present on the global flows of production and waste associated with a commodity or service. Details of this assignment will be provided early in the semester.

5. Final Exam
The final exam will be a 3-hour, self-scheduled, closed-book, open-notes exam run through the registrar.
